SUPPLIES

- Clear Packing Tape (Thicker is better)
- Printed Images (from copier, magazines, etc.)
- Water (room temperature)
- Container for Water
- Craft Stick
- Double Stick Tape

TOOLS

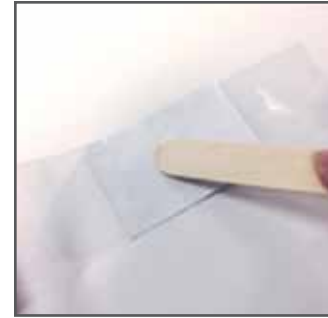

- Scissors
- Paper Trimmer
- Paper Towels

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Make color copies of your images. Laser copies work best, but you can test inkjet copies to see if it will bleed in the water. Trim images down to the width of the clear packing tape (about 2 in.)

2. Pull out some tape and place in front of you with the adhesive side facing up.

3. Carefully place an image on the tape with the image side down on the adhesive side of the tape.

4. Use a craft stick or the bottom of a spoon to rub the back of the paper to burnish it to the tape. Press as hard as you can without damaging the paper.

5. Place the tape into a dish of room temperature water. Leave in for at least 5 - 10 minutes.

6. With the tape still in the water, rub the paper off. Get as much of the paper off as you can.

7. Let the tape dry, blotting excess water off with paper towels

8. Trim off excess tape. Use your DIY stickers to decorate jars and other surfaces. Depending on the tape and the image media, the tape will be sticky again after it is dry. Magazines usually do not get sticky again. If the tape loses the adhesive, use double stick tape to adhere to items.
