- Watercolors – shades of blue and purple, black
- Salt – table salt and or rock/sea salt
- Paintbrushes
- Paint palette for mixing paints
- Paper Towels
- Water

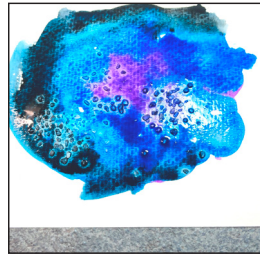

NOTE: Sample shown used Cotman watercolor paints on Strathmore watercolor paper.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Add a wash of clean water to the surface of the watercolor paper.

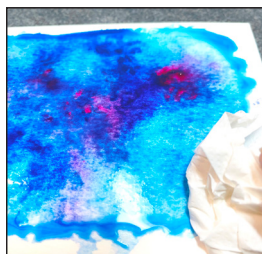

4a. Sample with rock salt sprinkled on.

2. Add drops of watercolor in blues and purples. The paint will start to spread out. Layer colors for interest.

5. Once the artwork is dry, brush off any excess salt crystals that didn't melt. Little white specks will be left.

3. If the color is too intense in an area, use a paper towel to blot and "lift" color off. Continue painting.

6. Use the artwork for different projects: Frame it as is. Add wording on top. Cut into tags. Use for cardmaking. Lots of different uses for these backgrounds.

4. While the paper and paints are still wet, loosely sprinkle some salt on top. The salt will start to interact with the paint. Using table salt or rock/sea salt will give you different effects. Avoid making large clumps of salt. Let dry.
