INSTRUCTIONS

1. Use the Color Scale to measure out three "I" size portions of white hearty clay and roll into one large ball.

3. Place the ghost onto a crumpled paper towel to dry. Measure out two "A" portions of clay and roll each into a small ball. Let dry.

When completely dry, paint the balls with the black acrylic paint for the eyes. Let dry.

5. Stretch the spiral alongside the jar to see how long you need it to be. You want it to end about 1/3 of the way down from the top to dangle the ghost. Trim as needed.

Glue the center end of the spiral to the inside of the jar lid.

7. Dab the purple alcohol ink on the tiny bulbs of the firefly lights. Take off the jar lid and set aside. At the bottom of the jar, spread some Spanish moss. Weave the firefly lights into the Spanish moss. Turn the lights on and hide the control at the bottom covered with more Spanish moss.

2. Shape the ball into a ghost shape. Hollow out the inside bottom half and curve the bottom edge. You can create "arms" on the sides. Like someone wearing a sheet to be a ghost. Use the end of a thin paintbrush to make two holes for eyes. Trim the length of the eye pin and stick in the center top of the ghost's head.

4. Cut a 2 in. circle from the clear acetate.

Slowly spiral cut the circle, making about a 1/4 in. spiral strip. Leave a 1/2 in. circle at the end, which is the center of the circle.

6. When the ghost is completely dry, glue in the black eyes. Reinforce the eye pin with some glue. Let dry.

Thread a 6 in. piece of the nylon filament through the eye pin. Tie to the end of the spiral. Screw the jar lid on to see the ghost dangle in the center.

8. Add other decorations inside of the jar if you want. Screw the lid back on the jar with the ghost dangling inside. Add other decorations on the outside of the jar if you want.
